WE MAY YET PAINT ADA A BRIGHT RED

What is considered by many as the most valuable mineral find for Ada was made a few days ago by a timber man in the employ of Mr. J. O. Tipton. The mineral is what is commonly known as red paint, and the fact that the vein is such a large one makes it exceedingly valuable.

Some days ago the timber man was searching a strip of country in the vicinity of Ada for walnut logs. Coming to a small stream he followed its course towards its head. While walking along the banks he noticed a peculiar coloring in the water and becoming interested followed its markings until it apparently ended in a bluff some twelve or fifteen feet high. Making a closer search the man scooped out several handfuls of sediment from the bottom of the shallow stream and found that it would form itself into a ball not unlike putty and when exposed to the air would harden. He examined the vein and found it to be about twelve feet in thickness.

In color the mineral ranges from a beautiful light brown to a dark red. It pulverizes readily, becoming as fine as flour. It easily mixes with linseed oil, and unlike Venetian red paint, is as smooth as the oil itself.

While the location of course, is kept a secret, Mr. Tipton is sanguine that a purchase or lease can be secured on the property and steps to this end have already been taken.

Samples of the mineral, both in the rough and pulverized have been sent to the Oklahoma University chemist, and an analysis is expected within the next few days.

EARLY COTTON TO JAPAN.

Oklahoma's First Consignment Routed To Island Empire.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 22.—The first consignment of this year's cotton from Oklahoma has been ordered routed over the Frisco railroad for Japan. The consignment includes 5,000 bales, and will be delivered as soon as the crop is picked. Several Japan cotton buyers have been in Oklahoma for the past two months getting consignments for their houses in the Orient.

The Oklahoma cotton is considered by the Japanese as the best produced in the world.

PERHAPS A THOUSAND FRAUDULENT ALLOTMENTS

Muskogee, I. T., Sept. 22.—The investigation of fraudulent enrollment and allotment of Creek citizens is progressing and results are forthcoming. Already there are fifteen cases in which proof of fraud is practically complete and it is estimated that there will, all told, be 250 such cases.

The Creek rolls were first closed to adults in 1901. Later they were reopened for new born Creeks up to March 4, 1905. Still later they were reopened for babies born prior to March 4, 1906. It is on the baby enrollments that most of the fraud is found. This comes in the form of false affidavits as to the time the children were born, the affidavits being made to show that the children were born in time to get on the rolls when in fact they were too late, and form a class known as "too late babies." On the first enrollment there were about 2,000 names entered. On the last one about 700. It is figured that this is entirely too many babies for the original 13,000 Creeks to have in five years. Nearly all of the fraudulent enrollments so far discovered have been negroes. It was impossible for the Dawes Commission to get witnesses in these cases because the government would not pay witness fees.

It is estimated that there will be 100 allotments that are already made that will prove fraudulent. In that event a suit will have to be entered in the district court to have the allotment deed set aside. The old allottees have received their deeds. The babies enrolled up to 1905 have been allotted but their deeds have not been issued to them. The fight just now is on fraudulent enrollment or the babies admitted under the last opening of the roll.

John G. Leiber who is conducting the investigation for the Creek nation, states that he believes that if the nation will continue a vigorous policy of investigation, with the assistance of the Dawes commission, 1,000 persons will be kept from getting allotments because they are not justly entitled to them. If this be true, it will save to the nation 100,000 acres of land.

A Graphical Description.

A newspaper man of the new state, who is now holding an enviable position and earning from $50 to $60 a month, gained his fame by writing up a cyclone which once swept his part of the country, and, according to his story, blew away everything but the scribe himself. The report stated that the wind turned a cellar upside down, turned a well inside out, blew the cracks out of a fence, changed a township line and whisked the mortgage off a farm.—K. C. Journal.

The Daily Star Suspends.

Chickasha, I. T., Sept. 22.—The Chickasha Daily Star has been discontinued. The Weekly Star will be continued. The Star was recently bought from Cad Allard by White & Smith of Kansas City.

BIG DYNAMITE EXPLOSION KILLS 12---$500,000 LOSS

Jellico, Tenn., Sept. 22.—Twelve deaths, the injuring of scores of other persons and $500,000 damage to property were caused here Friday when a car load of dynamite standing on a track near the Southern Railway depot exploded with a report that was heard twenty miles. Buildings were shattered in the business sections of the town and nearly every piece of glass within a radius of one mile of the scene was broken.

The explosion occurred at 8 o'clock in the morning. The freight car, belonging to the Pennsylvania lines, contained 450 boxes of 20,000 pounds of high explosives consigned to the Rand Powder Company at Learfield, Tenn. Two causes are assigned for the explosion. One is that three men were shooting at a mark on the car and that a bullet entered the car and caused the explosion. The other is that while the car was standing on a sidetrack a carload of pig iron was switched against it and that the impact caused the explosion. People here are divided as to the origin, some going so far as to say that they actually saw the men firing at the car with a rifle.

Editor Phillips Defends Press.

Contrary to report that has become circulated, it was W. H. L. Campbell, and not Mr. Lawrence, who split his trousers at Midland on the 8th by attacking the Democratic press of his constitutional district and declaring that they were in a trust in the charging of announcement fees.

The Eagle is not in the 87th, but has a thousand readers in that district who demand that the light be thrown on all matters political that concern them.

Where Campbell's grievance comes in, in fact, is that several days previous to the Midland meeting he sent a five-line local to the Ada News office (his official announcement) asking that paper to run it two weeks at the regular commercial rate of 5c per line, when he was informed that if his announcement was published it would be at the regular rate, which other candidates had paid, and that charges were in advance.

The inconsistency of Campbell's attitude is that he is a member of the State Campaign committee, which is conducting a press bureau and each week is drawing on the country papers for all of their available space, for the publishing of literature, educating the people on the live issues of the campaign.

The Democratic press of the country is recognized as the backbone of the party; upon its efforts largely depends the success of the party it represents and the election of the nominees, who afterward divide the spoils.

More labor in every department, more paper, ink and expense generally is required to publish a paper during a political campaign than at any other time, and it is an egotistical, penurious and short-sighted candidate who will withhold his support from the press, and at the same time expect to keep its readers posted on the political situation, and, after he is nominated, carry his name on the ticket at the head of the editorial column, and put forth its best efforts for his election.

The other two candidates, Messrs. Lawrence and Weaver, have followed the usual custom and announced in all papers of the district, as all other candidates have done, without a single complaint. It has not yet been explained why Campbell should be entitled to special privileges and favors.—Roff Eagle.

Dog and Rat Battle.

That the rat family in Ada is thoroughly Rooseveltian in the rapidity of increase has long been a matter of unfavorable comment. Also it is a notorious fact that the dog species enjoys a full representation in the community.

The pestiferous rodent has grown so bold now that he does battle with the canine for possession of the land. Early Saturday morning passersby witnessed a thrilling duel in the middle of Broadway between a big buck rat and a 6-months old pup. For a time the rat seemed to have the best of it; he went at it like a born fighter, jumping at and all over the pup. The latter seemed amazed; he had not counted on this sort of a fight and kept dodging on the defensive for a time. Finally, however, the pup found an opening and waded in. He got so enraged he did not stop with killing his little antagonist, but literally shook and chewed him to pieces.

It would be no matter for regret if the rats should become so warlike as to put up a fight against the dogs to the extent of mutual extermination.

CUBAN SITUATION HOURLY GROWING MORE SERIOUS

Washington, Sept. 22.—The advices from Havana yesterday only confirm the feeling which has been entertained here that the differences between the government of Cuba and the insurgent forces are irreconcilable and that even if the President's commissioners should succeed in accomplishing any arrangement for the settlement of the difficulties in Cuba, it could only be temporary and that a crisis must necessarily result sooner or later. Intervention therefore by the United States is likely to occur at any moment.

Officials of the War, State and Navy Departments, when shown the Havana bulletin telling of the impending crisis, would not admit the receipt of any confirmatory advices, but it is known definitely that the government officials here entertain the view as herein stated. It was said today that in case of intervention, one of the first acts of the United States would be the adoption of a policy of reconcentration, but without the horrors attending a similar policy of Gen. Weyler.

The true condition of affairs in Cuba has been made known through advices received here of most authentic origin. These positively assert that the present insurrection can last indefinitely because of the fact that neither the insurgents nor the government is able to overthrow the other. All business interests, it is declared, want intervention, while the insurgents are opposed to it because they want offices and graft which intervention would not bring. Trade is dead. Six weeks more of the present state of affairs, it is said, will mean ruin for the tobacco crop and immense loss in the next sugar crop.

Legislature has Adjourned

Tishomingo, I. T., Sept. 21.—The Chickasaw legislature has adjourned to meet later in the year after congress has taken some action on a memorial that is to be presented for its consideration. This memorial as adopted by the legislature, prays congress to deny the right of enrollment to new born children of freedman parents. Prior to adjournment the legislature appropriated $4,128 to defray its current expenses. A bill to appropriate $16,000 to defray the expenses of compiling, printing and publishing a history of the Chickasaw tribe was laid over until next session.

Took French Leave

One of Ada's best known citizens was in Roff a few days ago in quest of a black-haired, black-eyed, bewitching young lady, in whom he was particularly interested. He had been out on a lark a few nights before with the fair damsel, and had loaned her about $500 worth of his diamonds, when she took the first train out of Ada, neglecting to tell him good-bye. The Eagle was not authorized to insert a stray notice, but doubtless any information that would lead to her apprehension would be rewarded.—Roff Eagle.

Had a Still.

Oklahoma City, Ok., Sept. 22.—Charged with having a still in his possession, which he had made in St. Louis, Henry Blatter, a well to do farmer residing near this city, was arrested today by Detectives Forrer and Findlay, who were sent here from Washington ten days ago for that purpose.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Russell Sage's Ghoulish Proof Vault.

Any Person May Have One for $100, But the Disappearance of the Resurrectionists Has Lessened the Demand.

Boston.—One need not have the wealth of the late Russell Sage in order to purchase a ghoulish proof vault, for the same thing, or at least one equally burglar-proof, can be secured here for from $100 to $200. They are not in great demand hereabouts, for the same dangers do not exist as formerly, or exist at all, save for men of such prominence as this late eccentric millionaire. said a member of a prominent firm in speaking of this type of sarcophagus:

"I cannot see how any such sum as that mentioned in the newspapers could possibly be paid for a steel casket. They can be secured for a little over $100, and even if made to order could not be brought above a cost of $1,000. They are of simple construction, consisting only of a steel case which locks from within with spring locks. The ordinary kind cannot be opened without the use of a steel chisel, and then the heads of the bolts would have to be cut away.

"They are an absolute protection for such as possess the fear of body-snatchers, but they are not used very much here in the east. Now that the medical schools are well supplied, under the law, there is little incentive for this type of criminal to operate. In the south and west, however, they are in quite common use."

"Do you ever have a request for a casket which shall be provided with safeguards against burial alive?" was asked.

No More Burials Alive.

"No. Under our present methods burial alive is an impossibility. To be sure, there are some eccentric individuals who make odd requests, but in my long experience I have never come across one. This steel casket is as far as they ever vary in their expressed wishes."

A member of the local branch of the company, from whom it was reported the $22,000 casket was bought, also agreed that it would be impossible to expend this amount of money on the steel inclosure. He said:

"Our prices range from $100 to perhaps $500, and should such a thing be made to order, of heavier steel and other means of safeguarding against burial alive?"

"No; although, of course, such things could be made, to supply a whim. The steel casket is common enough, especially in countries where there is a great deal of rain, or in remote regions where the grave cannot be watched."

If as big a sum as $22,000 was actually expended on the burial arrangements of Mr. Sage, it must have been in other directions than for the mere inclosure. Local undertakers doubt it, and maintain it is absurd.

Grave Robberies Common.

Although the danger from grave robbery never became so acute in Massachusetts as elsewhere, up to within 25 years the crime was of common occurrence here. But in New York a series of startling exposures revealed the fact that there was a well organized body of men engaged in the work of supplying medical schools with the necessary cadavers for dissection. Until 1883, when the so-called anatomy bill was passed in that state, there was but this one way in which bodies could be secured. The prices paid for them were high, and in consequence a group of men about Syracuse Medical college and the Buffalo Medical college did a thriving business as "resurrectionists." Of them all, no one was more famous than Dr. Hervey W. Kendall, who at last was mysteriously murdered.

In more ways than one Dr. Kendall was a remarkable man. His temperament was such that he seemed to delight in things that horrified other men. He was a student at the medical college, where he was known as a man who was not a brilliant student, but as one who could do things better than most men when he made up his mind to do so. To look at the man was to see that he was out of the common. One who knew him well described him as follows:

"If Hervey had lived in the days of pirates he would have been a rival to Capt. Kidd. In the first place, he looked the part. Nine out of ten men would turn to get a look at him on the street. Almost six feet tall, he peared blacker than it really was, by reason of his waxy complexion, which was almost corpse-like in its yellowish whiteness. This mustache, which was long and flowing, gave him an air of ferocity which was really startling. He wore in winter a long ulster that came almost to his heels."

Skilled in Use of Weapons.

A glimpse of his living rooms in Warren street, Syracuse, was a revelation of the tastes of the man. The walls were hung with fells and a regular armory of weapons. An expert fencer and a dead shot, he led an existence that drew him away from all but a very few intimate friends.

His skill with the revolver was noteworthy. As an illustration of this, an acquaintance of his said:

"I never knew a surer marksman; he was absolute lightning. On one occasion he and I were in the old medical college one night, and had to go downstairs into the cellar, where the cadavers were kept in huge barrels of brine. I went ahead, carrying a candle, while Hervey followed me. He had a cigarette in his right hand and a package in his left. When half-way down the stairs, in the inky blackness, I heard a noise in one of the coal bins. Almost before I had time to catch the gleam from a pair of yellowish eyes, and to realize it was a prowling cat, I heard the report of a revolver. I jumped, and when I recovered myself looked around, to see this man kicking aside the dead body of the cat. He was laughing at my fright."

To a man of this morbid nature and one who, moreover, was absolutely dauntless, grave robbing ceased in Syracuse.

Family of Ghouls.

At about this time the country was startled by the weird story which followed the arrest of the McNamee family. Some three miles from the city there had lived for five years the father, two sons and a daughter. But little was known of them, although the neighbors frequently speculated on their means of earning a livelihood.

One night a farmer named Goodrich was returning to his home late from a visit to a distant relative, when he met in the dark road a team. The road was narrow, so that in passing he was able to see the occupants of the other vehicle. He recognized them as the old man McNamee and his daughter. He was somewhat surprised to notice that the girl was dressed in man's clothes, but still more surprised to see that a muffled figure sat between them. He stopped and asked a few commonplace questions, to which he received surly replies. At this point McNamee's horse started, and as he did so threw the hat from the head of the third figure. Goodrich nearly fell from his wagon as he recognized the set features of young Wilbur Hill, who had been buried a few days before.

Goodrich, pale from fright, hurried home and roused the neighbors. They opened the grave, which had but lately been filled, and found it empty. A search of the house of the McNamees revealed spades, ropes and all the other paraphernalia of grave robbing. Further investigation of the graveyard showed that many other bodies fearless and who courted adventure, this gruesome work of body snatching had its fascinations. It was illegal, and the best brains of the police force of the country were busy trying to stop it, which added another incentive to this man. It was a contest of mind and pluck, as he looked upon it. And so, while still a student, he organized a small gang of men who supplied cadavers to colleges even as far west as Michigan.

Emptied Numerous Graves.

The poorhouse graveyard was their favorite hunting ground, and at the inquest over the body of Kendall an officer testified that he did not believe there were a dozen graves in the cemetery containing bodies. But these ghouls even visited neighboring villages and the aristocratic burying ground at Oakwood. So bold did they become, and so powerless were the police to check them, that many citizens buried relatives and friends in distant cities.

Kendall was suspected, but he adopted a hundred ruses to throw the sleuths off his track. Time and time again he was almost captured in the act, but always made good his escape. Cemeteries were guarded and patrols placed about tombs, but still the medical school was supplied, and Kendall remained at large.

His end was as tragic and mysterious as his life had been. On May 8, 1882, Thomas Powell, an attendant at the county courthouse, looked from one of the windows and saw through the morning mist the body of a man lying in an adjacent field. There was a bullet hole between his eyes, but he was still conscious. He gave his name, but refused to divulge the name of the man who had done the deed. He died a few hours later, with his lips still sealed.

Near him lay a piece of carpet, two shovels and a satchel containing a cant-hook, a rope, a dark lantern, a bit and stake, a screwdriver and a burglar's jimmy. Whether he was shot in a quarrel with a pal or by a member of the vigilance committee which had been organized against the ghouls, no one knows. With his death, and the passage of a law giving the schools a legal means of securing ca-

were missing, and some of these were later discovered at Ann Arbor Medical school. The McNamees were arrested and imprisoned after a speedy trial.

Demand for Steel Caskets.

The unearthing of another gang of ghouls in New York came about in a most dramatic way, and nearly drove one of the innocent participants insane when he discovered his sister's body on the dissecting table.

Such things as these were coming to light every month in the early eighties, and naturally created much fear in the hearts of every one in the state of New York. It was at about this time that the demand was made for a casket which would withstand the depredations of these fiends. At first a cast-iron box was made, but shortly after this the modern ghoulish receptacle was evolved, with springs which fasten securely on the inside. Strict laws and saner methods on the part of the medical schools in the east have made their use unnecessary here. But in the vicinity of smaller and less scrupulous colleges they are in constant demand.

FINEST BREAKWATER IN WORLD.

English Harbor Formed by Mile of Walls Costing $9,000,000.

The harbor of Plymouth, England, is protected by what is claimed to be the greatest breakwater in the world.

The main part is 3,000 feet long, with two arms at angles extending 1,000 feet, thus making it nearly a mile on its entire length. It stretches across the entrance to the bay, two and a half miles from the city, and receives the force of the gales that frequently come up from the southwest.

In the center is a fortress of iron and masonry, and at either extremity a lighthouse 63 feet high.

Nearly four and a half million tons of stone were thrown into the sea as a foundation for this breakwater during the 41 years that it was building from 1812 to 1852, and it cost $9,000,000, but it made the harbor of Plymouth one of the safest in England.

The city of Plymouth fills several valleys and covers several hills. It used to be written Plymouth. No body knows how old the city is.

Good Arrangement of Cut Flowers

Single Lily or Rose May be Made Very Effective—Keeping Blossoms Fresh—Proper Harmony of Vase and Flowers—Celia Thaxter's Way.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

I am writing on a summer day, with every window open and the fragrance of honeysuckle and roses pervading the air. Everywhere fields and gardens are rioting in flowers. Nature is luxurious in the profusion of her bounty at mid-summer, and what with rambler roses entwining the cottage porch and clematis making an exquisite screen, and morning glories clamoring over stone walls, there is not a humble home anywhere on the continent that need fear comparison with a palace.

On the coast where the salt breezes sweep in from the sea and the fog often hangs its wet blanket for awhile over the dawning day, the flowers are gorgeous in color and grow with amazing swiftness. Farther inland, on mountain farms that in winter are buried in snow, one finds verandas and garden plots rich with every variety of blossoming plant. Many a hard-working woman expresses the latent poetry of her being by the care she lavishes on her garden and the flowers look up in her face as if they wanted to compensate her for narrowness and drudgery, and to give her the joy of which the years have cheated her.

I spent a summer day years ago with Celia Thaxter at her home on one of the Isles of Shoals. The sound of the sea was in our ears, the white surf broke on the shore. The poet's house was long and low and all about it there was an exquisite garden overflowing with flowers of every name and kind, the largest space being given to the old-fashioned darlings that every one knows and loves. There were lady's slipper and prince's feather, love-lies-bleeding, ribbon grass, pansies, lilies, larkspur, mignonette, verbenas, roses, geraniums, fox and I know not what else. The garden was simply a wilderness of beauty and in the house hundreds of vases held cut flowers, each vase being filled by the mistress and her maids with fresh specimens the moment there were signs of wilting or fading. The mantels were banked with flowers, the walls had a look of being covered with them, they stood on the piano, on tables and on the floor and in the midst of all, was the graceful splendid owner of the Paradise in a dress of silver gray with a silver arrow fastening her great knot of snowy hair. The whole picture fixed itself in memory once for all.

Mrs. Thaxter's rule for arranging cut flowers was inflexible. Each vase held flowers of a single variety, relieved only by their own foliage. The flame-like nasturtiums were massed in vases deep enough to afford plenty of water for the stems and flaring at the top that the flowers might not be crowded. With them were a few of their own green leaves. Carnations were arranged in tall vases of crystal clearness. Roses were in bowls. Fleur de lis were in opaque jars, the rule being in every instance so to mass the flowers as to give an effect of breadth and color.

Flowers should never be crowded. Sometimes a single rose or a single lily should have a vase all to itself. When flowers are arranged in clusters or bunches they may be contrasted, but no one should try to group too many tints or too many flowers in one vase, cup or bowl.

Certain small flowers may be kept in wide low platters with a bordering of ferns or green moss. In their arrangement for home adornment it is well to remember that the smaller and more delicate posies are prettiest for the desk and the dressing-table, while for decorative purposes as for a wedding or a reception larger flowers lend themselves better to larger effects.

Do not fear that you will lose flowers by cutting them. The more you cut, the more you will have. As a rule, a plant exhausts its possibilities of bloom if its flowers are left to wither and it speedily runs to seed. Fresh flowers for the table and the drawing-room may be had every day for the picking at this season, the wild dentizens of the field taking rank with the finest cultivated specimens when brought in doors and tastefully arranged. No flower should be kept in a house after it has lost its freshness. A stale bouquet hints too strongly of decay and death.

If the daughter or sister whose privilege it is to keep the house beautiful with flowers will change the water and wash the vases every morning and will clip a tiny bit from every stem, she will find her toil repaid by the enduring qualities of her treasures. Flowers last much longer in freshness when kept in a cool place over night. Those who cut them in the country to send to a city flower mission should do so in the dusk or just after sunset. They should then be packed in paper boxes, should be laid lengthwise on a bed of wet ferns and should have sheets of wet tissue paper lightly folded over them. Pains should be taken to ship them by express so that they will arrive at the hospitals, the city missions or the homes of the poor and sick in the early morning. They will reach their destination in good condition and words cannot tell the joy they will carry with them.

One day in January when New York was like St. Petersburg I found myself in the palatial home of Madame Millionaire. Every surrounding bespoke ease, luxury and entire indifference to the cost of anything great or small. A magnificent array of bride roses on a center table and a cluster of rare orchids in a corner moved me to admiration and delight.

Not many of us can afford to give an order so generous and so unlimited to a florist, but most of us may have a few blossoming plants in our homes in winter, and we may enjoy the pleasure given by cut flowers if we provide for it beforehand. If you mean to have flowers in your home next winter, you should lay your plans in August. Select in that month the plants that shall bloom in December and January. Pot them now and let them have a long period of rest before they are again expected to cheer you with bloom.

Avoid tawdry display in vases. Nothing is prettier than clear white glass when you wish to reveal the beauty of stem. Dull jars of gray, cream or dark green tints are pretty if you wish to mass the splendid autumn flowers. The vase and flowers must be in harmony. The vase should be subordinate to the flowers and not call attention to itself. The common mistake of supposing that a vase to be beautiful must be expensive is made by those who forget that the most graceful shapes are found in pressed glass and dull pottery, and that here beauty is a thing of taste rather than of money.

Princess Lace Fan

Many women are making charming little conceits in the form of collar sets, kerchief borders, tops for fans, cases for veils, gloves and what not from lace braids. Princess lace is one of the new laces that has quite a vogue during the spring and summer.

One of the obvious reasons for its popularity may be traced to the fact that it is not necessary for the beginner to be familiar with many of the elaborate lace stitches, in order to obtain pleasing and effective results.

It relies almost entirely on its beauty for the clever and judicious combination of braids. There are six varieties of lace used in making Princess Louise lace. For filling in the spaces a queer linen thread with little thorns is used.

An effective design for fan in bow knots is shown that will not be difficult.

BIG DYNAMITE EXPLOSION KILLS 12---$500,000 LOSS

Jellico, Tenn., Sept. 22.—Twelve deaths, the injuring of scores of other persons and $500,000 damage to property were caused here Friday when a car load of dynamite standing on a track near the Southern Railway depot exploded with a report that was heard twenty miles. Buildings were shattered in the business sections of the town and nearly every piece of glass within a radius of one mile of the scene was broken.

The explosion occurred at 8 o'clock in the morning. The freight car, belonging to the Pennsylvania lines, contained 450 boxes of 20,000 pounds of high explosives consigned to the Rand Powder Company at Learfield, Tenn. Two causes are assigned for the explosion. One is that three men were shooting at a mark on the car and that a bullet entered the car and caused the explosion. The other is that while the car was standing on a side-track a carload of pig iron was switched against it and that the impact caused the explosion. People here are divided as to the origin, some going so far as to say that they actually saw the men firing at the car with a rifle.

Editor Phillips Defends Press.

Contrary to report that has become circulated, it was W. H. L. Campbell, and not Mr. Lawrence, who split his trousers at Midland on the 8th by attacking the Democratic press of his constitutional district and declaring that they were in a trust in the charging of announcement fees.

The Eagle is not in the 87th, but has a thousand readers in that district who demand that the light be thrown on all matters political that concern them.

Where Campbell's grievance comes in fact, is that several days previous to the Midland meeting he sent a five-line local to the Ada News office (his official announcement) asking that paper to run it two weeks at the regular commercial rate of 5c per line, when he was informed that if his announcement was published it would be at the regular rate, which other candidates had paid, and that charges were in advance.

The inconsistency of Campbell's attitude is that he is a member of the State Campaign committee, which is conducting a press bureau and each week is drawing on the country papers for all of their available space, for the publishing of literature, educating the people on the live issues of the campaign.

The Democratic press of the country is recognized as the backbone of the party; upon its efforts largely depends the success of the party it represents and the election of the nominees, who afterward divide the spoils.

More labor in every department, more paper, ink and expense generally is required to publish a paper during a political campaign than at any other time, and it is an egotistical, penurious and short-sighted candidate who will withhold his support from the press, and at the same time expect to keep its readers posted on the political situation, and, after he is nominated, carry his name on the ticket at the head of the editorial column, and put forth its best efforts for his election.

The other two candidates, Messrs. Lawrence and Weaver, have followed the usual custom and announced in all papers of the district, as all other candidates have done, without a single complaint. It has not yet been explained why Campbell should be entitled to special privileges and favors. — Roff Eagle.

Dog and Rat Battle.

That the rat family in Ada is thoroughly Rooseveltian in the rapidity of increase has long been a matter of unfavorable comment. Also it is a notorious fact that the dog species enjoys a full representation in the community.

The pestiferous rodent has grown so bold now that he does battle with the canine for possession of the land. Early Saturday morning passersby witnessed a thrilling duel in the middle of Broadway between a big buck rat and a 6-months old pup. For a time the rat seemed to have the best of it; he went at it like a born fighter, jumping at and all over the pup. The latter seemed amazed; he had not counted on this sort of a fight and kept dodging on the defensive for a time. Finally, however, the pup found an opening and waded in. He got so enraged he did not stop with killing his little antagonist, but literally shook and chewed him to pieces.

It would be no matter for regret if the rats should become so warlike as to put up a fight against the dogs to the extent of mutual extermination.

WE MAY YET PAINT ADA A BRIGHT RED

What is considered by many as the most valuable mineral find for Ada was made a few days ago by a timber man in the employ of Mr. J. O. Tipton. The mineral is what is commonly known as red paint, and the fact that the vein is such a large one makes it exceedingly valuable.

Some days ago the timber man was searching a strip of country in the vicinity of Ada for walnut logs. Coming to a small stream he followed its course towards its head. While walking along the banks he noticed a peculiar coloring in the water and becoming interested followed its markings until it apparently ended in a bluff some twelve or fifteen feet high. Making a closer search the man scooped out several handfuls of sediment from the bottom of the shallow stream and found that it would form itself into a ball not unlike putty and when exposed to the air would harden. He examined the vein and found it to be about twelve feet in thickness.

In color the mineral ranges from a beautiful light brown to a dark red. It pulverizes readily, becoming as fine as flour. It easily mixes with linseed oil, and unlike Venetian red paint, is as smooth as the oil itself.

While the location of course, is kept a secret, Mr. Tipton is sanguine that a purchase or lease can be secured on the property and steps to this end have already been taken.

Samples of the mineral, both in the rough and pulverized have been sent to the Oklahoma University chemist, and an analysis is expected within the next few days.

The consignment includes 5,000 bales, and will be delivered as soon as the crop is picked. PERHAPS A THOUSAND FRAUDULENT ALLOTMENTS

Muskogee, I. T., Sept. 22.—The investigation of fraudulent enrollment and allotment of Creek citizens is progressing and results are forthcoming. Already there are fifteen cases in which proof of fraud is practically complete and it is estimated that there will, all told, be 250 such cases.

The Creek rolls were first closed to adults in 1901. Later they were reopened for new born Creeks up to March 4, 1905. Still later they were reopened for babies born prior to March 4, 1906. It is on the baby enrollments that most of the fraud is found. This comes in the form of false affidavits as to the time the children were born, the affidavits being made to show that the children were born in time to get on the rolls when in fact they were too late, and form a class known as "too late babies." On the first enrollment there were about 2,000 names entered. On the last one about 700. It is figured that this is entirely too many babies for the original 13,000 Creeks to have in five years. Nearly all of the fraudulent enrollments so far discovered have been negroes. It was impossible for the Dawes Commission to get witnesses in these cases because the government would not pay witness fees.

It is estimated that there will be 100 allotments that are already made that will prove fraudulent. In that event a suit will have to be entered in the district court to have the allotment deed set aside. The old allottees have received their deeds. The babies enrolled up to 1905 have been allotted but their deeds have not been issued to them. The fight just now is on fraudulent enrollment or the babies admitted under the last opening of the roll.

John G. Leiber who is conducting the investigation for the Creek nation, states that he believes that if the nation will continue a vigorous policy of investigation, with the assistance of the Dawes commission, 1,000 persons will be kept from getting allotments because they are not justly entitled to them. If this be true, it will save to the nation 100,000 acres of land.

A Graphical Description.

A newspaper man of the new state, who is now holding an enviable position and earning from $50 to $60 a month, gained his fame by writing up a cyclone which once swept his part of the country, and, according to his story, blew away everything but the scribe himself. The report stated that the wind turned a cellar upside down, turned a well inside out, blew the cracks out of a fence, changed a township line and whisked the mortgage off a farm. — K. C. Journal.

CUBAN SITUATION HOURLY GROWING MORE SERIOUS

Washington, Sept. 22.—The advices from Havana yesterday only confirm the feeling which has been entertained here that the differences between the government of Cuba and the insurgent forces are irreconcilable and that even if the President's commissioners should succeed in accomplishing any arrangement for the settlement of the difficulties in Cuba, it could only be temporary and that a crisis must necessarily result sooner or later. Intervention therefore by the United States is likely to occur at any moment.

Officials of the War, State and Navy Departments, when shown the Havana bulletin telling of the impending crisis, would not admit the receipt of any confirmatory advices, but it is known definitely that the government officials here entertain the view as herein stated. It was said today that in case of intervention, one of the first acts of the United States would be the adoption of a policy of reconcentration, but without the horrors attending a similar policy of Gen. Weyler.

The true condition of affairs in Cuba has been made known through advices received here of most authentic origin. These positively assert that the present insurrection can last indefinitely because of the fact that neither the insurgents nor the government is able to overthrow the other. All business interests, it is declared, want intervention, while the insurgents are opposed to it because they want offices and graft which intervention would not bring. Trade is dead. Six weeks more of the present state of affairs, it is said, will mean ruin for the tobacco crop and immense loss in the next sugar crop.

Legislature has Adjourned

Tishomingo, I. T., Sept. 21.—The Chickasaw legislature has adjourned to meet later in the year after congress has taken some action on a memorial that is to be presented for its consideration. This memorial as adopted by the legislature, prays congress to deny the right of enrollment to new born children of freedman parents. Prior to adjournment the legislature appropriated $4,128 to defray its current expenses. A bill to appropriate $16,000 to defray the expenses of compiling, printing and publishing a history of the Chickasaw tribe was laid over until next session.

Took French Leave

One of Ada's best known citizens was in Roff a few days ago in quest of a black-haired, black-eyed, bewitching young lady, in whom he was particularly interested. He had been out on a lark a few nights before with the fair damsel, and had loaned her about $500 worth of his diamonds, when she took the first train out of Ada, neglecting to tell him good-bye. The Eagle was not authorized to insert a stray notice, but doubtless any information that would lead to her apprehension would be rewarded. — Roff Eagle.

Had a Sniff.

Oklahoma City, Ok., Sept. 22.—Charged with having a still in his possession, which he had made in St. Louis, Henry Blatter, a well to do farmer residing near this city, was arrested today by Detectives Forrer and Findlay, who were sent here from Washington ten days ago for that purpose.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Russell Sage's Ghoul Proof Vault.

Any Person May Have One for $100, But the Disappearance of the Resurrectionists Has Lessened the Demand.

Boston.—One need not have the wealth of the late Russell Sage in order to purchase a ghoulish-proof vault, for the same thing, or at least one equally burglar-proof, can be secured here for from $100 to $200. They are not in great demand hereabouts, for the same reasons do not exist as formerly, or exist at all, save for men of such prominence as this late eccentric millionaire said a member of a prominent firm in speaking of this type of sarcophagus:

"I cannot see how any such sum as that mentioned in the newspapers could possibly be paid for a steel casket. They can be secured for a little over $100, and even if made to order could not be brought above a cost of $1,000. They are of simple construction, consisting only of a steel case which locks from within with spring locks. The ordinary kind cannot be opened without the use of a steel chisel, and then the heads of the bolts would have to be cut away."

"They are an absolute protection for such as possess the fear of body-snatchers, but they are not used very much here in the east. Now that the medical schools are well supplied, under the law, there is little incentive for this type of criminal to operate. In the south and west, however, they are in quite common use."

"Do you ever have a request for a casket which shall be provided with safeguards against burial alive?" was asked.

No More Burials Alive.

"No. Under our present methods burial alive is an impossibility. To be sure, there are some eccentric individuals who make odd requests, but in my long experience I have never come across one. This steel casket is as far as they ever vary in their expressed wishes."

A member of the local branch of the company, from whom it was reported the $22,000 casket was bought, also agreed that it would be impossible to expend this amount of money on the steel inclosure. He said:

"Our prices range from $100 to perhaps $500, and should such a thing be made to order, of heavier steel and other means of safeguarding against burial alive?"

"No; although, of course, such things could be made, to supply a whim. The steel casket is common enough, especially in countries where there is a great deal of rain, or in remote regions where the grave cannot be watched."

If as big a sum as $22,000 was actually expended on the burial arrangements of Mr. Sage, it must have been in other directions than for the mere inclosure. Local undertakers doubt it, and maintain it is absurd.

Grave Robberies Common.

Although the danger from grave robbing never became so acute in Massachusetts as elsewhere, up to within 25 years the crime was of common occurrence here. But in New York a series of startling exposures revealed the fact that there was a well organized body of men engaged in the work of supplying medical schools with the necessary cadavers for dissection. Until 1893, when the so-called anatomy bill was passed in that state, there was but this one way in which bodies could be secured. The prices paid for them were high, and in consequence a group of men about Syracuse Medical college and the Buffalo Medical college did a thriving business as "resurrectionists." Of them all, no one was more famous than Dr. Hervey W. Kendall, who at last was mysteriously murdered.

In more ways than one Dr. Kendall was a remarkable man. His temperament was such that he seemed to delight in things that horrified other men. He was a student at the medical college, where he was known as a man who was not a brilliant student, but as one who could do things better than most men when he made up his mind to do so. To look at the man was to see that he was out of the common. One who knew him well described him as follows:

"If Hervey had lived in the days of pirates he would have been a rival to Capt. Kidd. In the first place, he looked the part. Nine out of ten men would turn to get a look at him on the street. Almost six feet tall, he fearless and who courted adventure, this gruesome work of body snatching had its fascinations. It was illegal, and the best brains of the police force of the country were busy trying to stop it, which added another incentive to this man. It was a contest of mind and pluck, as he looked upon it. And so, while still a student, he organized a small gang of men who supplied cadavers to colleges even as far west as Michigan."

THE McNAMEEGIRL WAS AN ENTHUSIASTIC PARTICIPANT IN THE BODY-SNATCHING EXPEDITIONS OF HER FAMILY

Emptied Numerous Graves.

The poorhouse graveyard was their favorite hunting ground, and at the inquest over the body of Kendall an officer testified that he did not believe there were a dozen graves in the cemetery containing bodies. But these ghouls even visited neighboring villages and the aristocratic burying ground at Onkwood. So bold did they become, and so powerless were the police to check them, that many citizens buried relatives and friends in distant cities.

Kendall was suspected, but he adopted a hundred ruses to throw the sleuths off his track. Time and time again he was almost captured in the act, but always made good his escape. Cemeteries were guarded and patrols placed about tombs, but still the medical school was supplied, and Kendall remained at large.

His end was as tragic and mysterious as his life had been. On May 8, 1892, Thomas Powell, an attendant at the county courthouse, looked from one of the windows and saw through the morning mist the body of a man lying in an adjacent field. There was a bullet hole between his eyes, but he was still conscious. He gave his name, but refused to divulge the name of the man who had done the deed. He died a few hours later, with his lips still sealed.

Near him lay a piece of carpet, two shovels and a satchel containing a can-hook, a rope, a dark lantern, a bit and stail, a screwdriver and a burglar's jimmy. Whether he was shot in a quarrel with a pal or by a member of the vigilance committee which had been organized against the ghouls, no one knows. With his death, and the passage of a law giving the schools a legal means of securing an-

with special arrangements, it might be brought up to over $1,000, but scarcely more. I have heard nothing to the effect that Mr. Sage's sarcophagus was bought of our firm, but if it was it is scarcely probable that any such price as this was paid for it."

"Have you in ordinary use special arrangements like electric bells or other means of safeguarding against burial alive?"

were missing, and some of these were later discovered at Ann Arbor Medical school. The McNamees were arrested and imprisoned after a speedy trial.

Demand for Steel Caskets.

The unearthing of another gang of ghouls in New York came about in a most dramatic way, and nearly drove one of the innocent participants insane when he discovered his sister's body on the dissecting table.

Such things as these were coming to light every month in the early eighties, and naturally created much fear in the hearts of every one in the state of New York. It was at about this time that the demand was made for a casket which would withstand the depredations of these fiends. At first a cast-iron box was made, but shortly after this the modern ghoulish-proof receptacle was evolved, with springs which fastened securely on the inside. Strict laws and saner methods on the part of the medical schools in the east have made their use unnecessary here. But in the vicinity of smaller and less scrupulous colleges they are in constant demand.

FINEST BREAKWATER IN WORLD.

English Harbor Formed by Mile of Walls Costing $9,000,000.

The harbor of Plymouth, England, is protected by what is claimed to be the greatest breakwater in the world. The main part is 3,000 feet long, with two arms at angles extending 1,000 feet, thus making it nearly a mile on its entire length. It stretches across the entrance to the bay, two and a half miles from the city, and receives the force of the gales that frequently come up from the southwest.

In the center is a fortress of iron and masonry, and at either extremity a lighthouse 68 feet high.

Nearly four and a half million tons of stone were thrown into the sea as a foundation for this breakwater during the 41 years that it was building from 1812 to 1853, and it cost $9,000,000, but it made the harbor of Plymouth one of the safest in England.

The city of Plymouth fills several valleys and covers several hills. It used to be written Plymouth. No body knows how old the city is.

Good Arrangement of Cut Flowers

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

I am writing on a summer day, with every window open and the fragrance of honeysuckle and roses pervading the air. Everywhere fields and gardens are rioting in flowers. Nature is luxurious in the profusion of her bounty at mid-summer, and what with rambling roses entwining the cottage porch and clematis making an exquisite screen, and morning glories clamoring over stone walls, there is not a humble home anywhere on the continent that need fear comparison with a palace.

On the coast where the salt breezes sweep in from the sea and the fog often hangs its wet blanket for awhile over the dawning day, the flowers are gorgeous in color and grow with amazing swiftness. Farther inland, on mountain farms that in winter are buried in snow, one finds verandas and garden plots rich with every variety of blossoming plant. Many a hard-working woman expresses the latent poetry of her being by the care she lavishes on her garden and the flowers look up in her face as if they wanted to compensate her for narrowness and drudgery, and to give her the joy of which the years have cheated her.

I spent a summer day years ago with Celia Thaxter at her home on one of the Isles of Shoals. The sound of the sea was in our ears, the white surf broke on the shore. The poet's house was long and low and all about it there was an exquisite garden overflowing with flowers of every name and kind, the largest space being given to the old-fashioned darlings that every one knows and loves. There were lady's slipper and prince's feather, love-lies-bleeding, ribbon grass, pansies, lilies, larkspur, mignonette, verbena, roses, geraniums, floss and I know not what else. The garden was simply a wilderness of beauty and in the house hundreds of vases held cut flowers, each vase being filled by the mistress and her maids with fresh specimens the moment there were signs of wilting or fading. The mantels were banked with flowers, the walls had a look of being covered with them, they stood on the piano, on tables and on the floor and in the midst of all, was the graceful splendid owner of the Paradise in a dress of silver gray with a silver arrow fastening her great knot of snowy hair. The whole picture fixed itself in memory once for all.

Mrs. Thaxter's rule for arranging cut flowers was inflexible. Each vase held flowers of a single variety, relieved only by their own foliage. The flame-like nasturtiums were massed in vases deep enough to afford plenty of water for the stems and flaring at the top that the flowers might not be crowded. With them were a few of their own green leaves. Carnations were arranged in tall vases of crystal clearness. Roses were in bowls. Fleur de lis were in opaque jars, the rule being in every instance so to mass the flowers as to give an effect of breadth and color.

Flowers should never be crowded. Sometimes a single rose or a single lily should have a vase all to itself. When flowers are arranged in clusters or bunches they may be contrasted, but no one should try to group too many tints or too many flowers in one vase, cup or bowl.

Certain small flowers may be kept in wide low platters with a bordering of ferns or green moss. In their arrangement for home adornment it is well to remember that the smaller and more delicate posies are prettiest for the desk and the dressing-table, while for decorative purposes as for a wedding or a reception larger flowers lend themselves better to larger effects.

Do not fear that you will lose flowers by cutting them. The more you cut, the more you will have. As a rule, a plant exhausts its possibilities of bloom if its flowers are left to wither and it speedily runs to seed. Fresh flowers for the table and the drawing-room may be had every day for the picking at this season, the wild denseness of the field taking rank with the finest cultivated specimens when brought in doors and tastefully arranged. No flower should be kept in a house after it has lost its freshness. A stale bouquet hints too strongly of decay and death.

If the daughter or sister whose privilege it is to keep the house beautiful with flowers will change the water and wash the vases every morning and will clip a tiny bit from every stem, she will find her toil repaid by the enduring qualities of her treasures. Flowers kept much longer in freshness when last in a cool place over night. Those who cut them in the country to send to a city flower mission should do so in the dusk or just after sunset. They should then be packed in paper boxes, should be laid lengthwise on a bed of wet ferns and should have sheets of wet tissue paper lightly folded over them. Pains should be taken to ship them by express so that they will arrive at the hospitals, the city missions or the homes of the poor and sick in the early morning. They will reach their destination in good condition and words cannot tell the joy they will carry with them.

One day in January when New York was like St. Petersburg I found myself in the palatial home of Madame Millionaire. Every surrounding bespoke ease, luxury and entire indifference to the cost of anything great or small. A magnificent array of dried roses on a center table and a cluster of rare orchids in a corner moved me to admiration and delight.

Not many of us can afford to give an order so generous and so unlimited to a florist, but most of us may have a few blossoming plants in our homes in winter, and we may enjoy the pleasure given by cut flowers if we provide for it beforehand. If you mean to have flowers in your home next winter, you should lay your plans in August. Select in that month the plants that shall bloom in December and January. Pot them now and let them have a long period of rest before they are again expected to cheer you with bloom.

Avoid tawdry display in vases. Nothing is prettier than clear white glass when you wish to reveal the beauty of stem. Dull jars of gray, cream or dark green tints are pretty if you wish to mass the splendid autumn flowers. The vase and flowers must be in harmony. The vase should be subordinate to the flowers and not call attention to itself. The common mistake of supposing that a vase to be beautiful must be expensive is made by those who forget that the most graceful shapes are found in pressed glass and dull pottery, and that here beauty is a thing of taste rather than of money.

Princess Lace Fan

Many women are making charming little conceits in the form of collar sets, kerchief borders, tops for fans, cases for vases, gloves and what not from lace braids. Princess lace is one of the new laces that has quite a vogue during the spring and summer.

One of the obvious reasons for its popularity may be traced to the fact that it is not necessary for the beginner to be familiar with many of the elaborate lace stitches, in order to obtain pleasing and effective results. It relies almost entirely on its beauty for the clever and judicious combination of braids. There are six varieties of lace used in making Princess Louisa lace. For filling in the spaces a queer linen thread with little thorns is used.

An effective design for fan in bow knots is shown that will not be difficult.

WE MAY YET PAINT ADA A BRIGHT RED

What is considered by many as the most valuable mineral find for Ada was made a few days ago by a timber man in the employ of Mr. J. O. Tipton. The mineral is what is commonly known as red paint, and the fact that the vein is such a large one makes it exceedingly valuable.

Some days ago the timber man was searching a strip of country in the vicinity of Ada for walnut logs. Coming to a small stream he followed its course towards its head. While walking along the banks he noticed a peculiar coloring in the water and becoming interested followed its markings until it apparently ended in a bluff some twelve or fifteen feet high. Making a closer search the man scooped out several handfuls of sediment from the bottom of the shallow stream and found that it would form itself into a ball not unlike putty and when exposed to the air would harden. He examined the vein and found it to be about twelve feet in thickness.

In color the mineral ranges from a beautiful light brown to a dark red. It pulverizes readily, becoming as fine as flour. It easily mixes with linseed oil, and unlike Venetian red paint, is as smooth as the oil itself.

While the location of course, is kept a secret, Mr. Tipton is sanguine that a purchase or lease can be secured on the property and steps to this end have already been taken.

Samples of the mineral, both in the rough and pulverized have been sent to the Oklahoma University chemist, and an analysis is expected within the next few days.

EARLY COTTON TO JAPAN.

Oklahoma's First Consignment Routed To Island Empire.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 22.—The first consignment of this year's cotton from Oklahoma has been ordered routed over the Frisco railroad for Japan. The consignment includes 5,000 bales, and will be delivered as soon as the crop is picked. Several Japan cotton buyers have been in Oklahoma for the past two months getting consignments for their houses in the Orient.

The Oklahoma cotton is considered by the Japanese as the best produced in the world.

PERHAPS A THOUSAND FRAUDULENT ALLOTMENTS

Muskogee, I. T., Sept. 22.—The investigation of fraudulent enrollment and allotment of Creek citizens is progressing and results are forthcoming. Already there are fifteen cases in which proof of fraud is practically complete and it is estimated that there will, all told, be 250 such cases.

The Creek rolls were first closed to adults in 1901. Later they were reopened for new born Creeks up to March 4, 1905. Still later they were reopened for babies born prior to March 4, 1906. It is on the baby enrollments that most of the fraud is found. This comes in the form of false affidavits as to the time the children were born, the affidavits being made to show that the children were born in time to get on the rolls when in fact they were too late, and form a class known as "too late babies." On the first enrollment there were about 2,000 names entered. On the last one about 700. It is figured that this is entirely too many babies for the original 13,000 Creeks to have in five years. Nearly all of the fraudulent enrollments so far discovered have been negroes. It was impossible for the Dawes Commission to get witnesses in these cases because the government would not pay witness fees.

It is estimated that there will be 100 allotments that are already made that will prove fraudulent. In that event a suit will have to be entered in the district court to have the allotment deed set aside. The old allottees have received their deeds. The babies enrolled up to 1905 have been allotted but their deeds have not been issued to them. The fight just now is on fraudulent enrollment or the babies admitted under the last opening of the roll.

John G. Leiber who is conducting the investigation for the Creek nation, states that he believes that if the nation will continue a vigorous policy of investigation, with the assistance of the Dawes commission, 1,000 persons will be kept from getting allotments because they are not justly entitled to them. If this be true, it will save to the nation 100,000 acres of land.

A Graphical Description.

A newspaper man of the new state, who is now holding an enviable position and earning from $50 to $60 a month, gained his fame by writing up a cyclone which once swept his part of the country, and, according to his story, blew away everything but the scribe himself. BIG DYNAMITE EXPLOSION KILLS 12--$500,000 LOSS

Jellico, Tenn., Sept. 22.—Twelve deaths, the injuring of scores of other persons and $500,000 damage to property were caused here Friday when a car load of dynamite standing on a track near the Southern Railway depot exploded with a report that was heard twenty miles. Buildings were shattered in the business sections of the town and nearly every piece of glass within a radius of one mile of the scene was broken.

The explosion occurred at 8 o'clock in the morning. The freight car, belonging to the Pennsylvania lines, contained 450 boxes of 20,000 pounds of high explosives consigned to the Rand Powder Company at Learfield, Tenn. Two causes are assigned for the explosion. One is that three men were shooting at a mark on the car and that a bullet entered the car and caused the explosion. The other is that while the car was standing on a sidetrack a carload of pig iron was switched against it and that the impact caused the explosion. People here are divided as to the origin, some going so far as to say that they actually saw the men firing at the car with a rifle.

Editor Phillips Defends Press.

Contrary to report that has become circulated, it was W. H. L. Campbell, and not Mr. Lawrence, who split his trousers at Midland on the 8th by attacking the Democratic press of his constitutional district and declaring that they were in a trust in the charging of announcement fees.

The Eagle is not in the 87th, but has a thousand readers in that district who demand that the light be thrown on all matters political that concern them.

Where Campbell's grievance comes in is in fact, is that several days previous to the Midland meeting he sent a five-line local to the Ada News office (his official announcement) asking that paper to run it two weeks at the regular commercial rate of 5c per line, when he was informed that if his announcement was published it would be at the regular rate, which other candidates had paid, and that charges were in advance.

The inconsistency of Campbell's attitude is that he is a member of the State Campaign committee, which is conducting a press bureau and each week is drawing on the country papers for all of their available space, for the publishing of literature, educating the people on the live issues of the campaign.

The Democratic press of the country is recognized as the backbone of the party; upon its efforts largely depends the success of the party it represents and the election of the nominees, who afterward divide the spoils.

More labor in every department, more paper, ink and expense generally is required to publish a paper during a political campaign than at any other time, and it is an egotistical, penurious and short-sighted candidate who will withhold his support from the press, and at the same time expect to keep its readers posted on the political situation, and, after he is nominated, carry his name on the ticket at the head of the editorial column, and put forth its best efforts for his election.

The other two candidates, Messrs. Lawrence and Weaver, have followed the usual custom and announced in all papers of the district, as all other candidates have done, without a single complaint. It has not yet been explained why Campbell should be entitled to special privileges and favors.—Roff Eagle.

Dog and Rat Battle.

That the rat family in Ada is thoroughly Rooseveltian in the rapidity of increase has long been a matter of unfavorable comment. Also it is a notorious fact that the dog species enjoys a full representation in the community.

The pestiferous rodent has grown so bold now that he does battle with the canine for possession of the land. Early Saturday morning passersby witnessed a thrilling duel in the middle of Broadway between a big buck rat and a 6-months old pup. For a time the rat seemed to have the best of it; he went at it like a born fighter, jumping at and all over the pup. The latter seemed amazed; he had not counted on this sort of a fight and kept dodging on the defensive for a time. Finally, however, the pup found an opening and waded in. He got so enraged he did not stop with killing his little antagonist, but literally shook and chewed him to pieces.

It would be no matter for regret if the rats should become so warlike as to put up a fight against the dogs to the extent of mutual extermination.

CUBAN SITUATION HOURLY GROWING MORE SERIOUS

Washington, Sept. 22.—The advice from Havana yesterday only confirm the feeling which has been entertained here that the differences between the government of Cuba and the insurgent forces are irreconcilable and that even if the President's commissioners should succeed in accomplishing any arrangement for the settlement of the difficulties in Cuba, it could only be temporary and that a crisis must necessarily result sooner or later. Intervention therefore by the United States is likely to occur at any moment.

Officials of the War, State and Navy Departments, when shown the Havana bulletin telling of the impending crisis, would not admit the receipt of any confirmatory advices, but it is known definitely that the government officials here entertain the view as herein stated. It was said today that in case of intervention, one of the first acts of the United States would be the adoption of a policy of reconcentration, but without the horrors attending a similar policy of Gen. Weyler.

The true condition of affairs in Cuba has been made known through advices received here of most authentic origin. These positively assert that the present insurrection can last indefinitely because of the fact that neither the insurgents nor the government is able to overthrow the other. All business interests, it is declared, want intervention, while the insurgents are opposed to it because they want offices and graft which intervention would not bring. Trade is dead. Six weeks more of the present state of affairs, it is said, will mean ruin for the tobacco crop and immense loss in the next sugar crop.

Legislature has Adjourned

Tishomingo, I. T., Sept. 21.—The Chickasaw legislature has adjourned to meet later in the year after congress has taken some action on a memorial that is to be presented for its consideration. This memorial as adopted by the legislature, prays congress to deny the right of enrollment to new born children of freedman parents. Prior to adjournment the legislature appropriated $4,128 to defray its current expenses. A bill to appropriate $16,000 to defray the expenses of compiling, printing and publishing a history of the Chickasaw tribe was laid over until next session.

Took French Leave

One of Ada's best known citizens was in Roff a few days ago in quest of a black-haired, black-eyed, bewitching young lady, in whom he was particularly interested. He had been out on a lark a few nights before with the fair dame, and had loaned her about $500 worth of his diamonds, when she took the first train out of Ada, neglecting to tell him good-bye. The Eagle was not authorized to insert a stray notice, but doubtless any information that would lead to her apprehension would be rewarded.—Roff Eagle.

Oklahoma City, Ok., Sept. 22.—Charged with having a still in his possession, which he had made in St. Louis, Henry Blatter, a well to do farmer residing near this city, was arrested today by Detectives Forrer and Findlay, who were sent here from Washington ten days ago for that purpose.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Russell Sage's Ghoul Proof Vault.

Any Person May Have One for $100, But the Disappearance of the Resurrectionists Has Lessened the Demand.

Boston.—One need not have the wealth of the late Russell Sage in order to purchase a ghoulish-proof casket, for the same thing, or at least one equally burglar-proof, can be secured here for from $100 to $200. They are not in great demand hereabouts, for the same dangers do not exist as formerly, or exist at all, save for men of such prominence as this late eccentric millionaire, said a member of a prominent firm in speaking of this type of sarcophagus:

"I cannot see how any such sum as that mentioned in the newspapers could possibly be paid for a steel casket. They can be secured for a little over $100, and even if made to order could not be brought above a cost of $1,000. They are of simple construction, consisting only of a steel case which locks from within with spring locks. The ordinary kind cannot be opened without the use of a steel chisel, and then the heads of the bolts would have to be cut away."

"They are an absolute protection for such as possess the fear of body-snatchers, but they are not used very much here in the east. Now that the medical schools are well supplied, under the law, there is little incentive for this type of criminal to operate. In the south and west, however, they are in quite common use."

"Do you ever have a request for a casket which shall be provided with safeguards against burial alive?" was asked.

No More Burials Alive.

"No. Under our present methods burial alive is an impossibility. To be sure, there are some eccentric individuals who make odd requests, but in my long experience I have never come across one. This steel casket is as far as they ever vary in their expressed wishes."

A member of the local branch of the company, from whom it was reported the $22,000 casket was bought, also agreed that it would be impossible to expend this amount of money on the steel inclosure. He said:

"Our prices range from $100 to perhaps $500, and should such a thing be made to order, of heavier steel and other means of safeguarding against burial alive?"

"No; although, of course, such things could be made, to supply a whim. The steel casket is common enough, especially in countries where there is a great deal of rain, or in remote regions where the grave cannot be watched."

If as big a sum as $22,000 was actually expended on the burial arrangements of Mr. Sage, it must have been in other directions than for the mere inclosure. Local undertakers doubt it, and maintain it is absurd.

Grave Robberies Common.

Although the danger from grave robbing never became so acute in Massachusetts as elsewhere, up to within 25 years the crime was of common occurrence here. But in New York a series of startling exposures revealed the fact that there was a well organized body of men engaged in the work of supplying medical schools with the necessary cadavers for dissection. Until 1883, when the so-called anatomy bill was passed in that state, there was but this one way in which bodies could be secured. The prices paid for them were high, and in consequence a group of men about Syracuse Medical college and the Buffalo Medical college did a thriving business as "resurrectionists." Of them all, no one was more famous than Dr. Hervey W. Kendall, who at last was mysteriously murdered.

In more ways than one Dr. Kendall was a remarkable man. His temperament was such that he seemed to delight in things that horrified other men. He was a student at the medical college, where he was known as a man who was not a brilliant student, but as one who could do things better than most men when he made up his mind to do so. To look at the man was to see that he was out of the common. One who knew him well described him as follows:

"If Hervey had lived in the days of pirates he would have been a rival to Capt. Kidd. In the first place, he looked the part. Nine out of ten men would turn to get a look at him on the street. Almost six feet tall, he was almost as tall as a man, with a reason of his very complexion, which was almost corpse-like in its yellowish whiteness. This mustache, which was long and flowing, gave him an air of ferocity which was really startling. He wore a winter long ulster that came almost to his heels."

Skilled in Use of Weapons.

A glimpse of his living rooms in Warren street, Syracuse, was a revelation of the tastes of the man. The walls were hung with felle and a regular armory of weapons. An expert fencer and a dead shot, he led an existence that drew him away from all but a very few intimate friends.

His skill with the revolver was noteworthy. As an illustration of this, an acquaintance of his said:

"I never knew a surer marksman; he was absolute lightning. On one occasion he and I were in the old medical college one night, and had to go downstairs into the cellar, where the cadavers were kept in huge barrels of brine. I went ahead, carrying a candle, while Hervey followed me. He had a cigarette in his right hand and a package in his left. When half-way down the stairs, in the inky blackness, I heard a noise in one of the coal bins. Almost before I had time to catch the gleam from a pair of yellowish eyes, and to realize it was a prowling cat, I heard the report of a revolver. I jumped, and when I recovered myself looked around, to see this man kicking aside the dead body of the cat. He was laughing at my fright."

To a man of this morbid nature and one who, moreover, was absolutely

fearless and who courted adventure, this ghoulish work of body snatching had its fascinations. It was illegal, and the best brains of the police force of the country were busy trying to stop it, which added another incentive to this man. It was a contest of mind and pluck, as he looked upon it. And so, while still a student, he organized a small gang of men who supplied cadavers to colleges even as far west as Michigan.

Emptied Numerous Graves.

The poorhouse graveyard was their favorite hunting ground, and at the inquest over the body of Kendall an officer testified that he did not believe there were a dozen graves in the cemetery containing bodies. But these ghouls even visited neighboring villages and the aristocratic burying ground at Oakwood. So bold did they become, and so powerless were the police to check them, that many citizens buried relatives and friends in distant cities.

Kendall was suspected, but he adopted a hundred ruses to throw the sleuths off his track. Time and time again he was almost captured in the act, but always made good his escape. Cemeteries were guarded and patrols placed about tombs, but still the medical school was supplied, and Kendall remained at large.

His end was as tragic and mysterious as his life had been. On May 8, 1882, Thomas Powell, an attendant at the county courthouse, looked from one of the windows and saw through the morning mist the body of a man lying in an adjacent field. There was a bullet hole between his eyes, but he was still conscious. He gave his name, but refused to divulge the name of the man who had done the deed. He died a few hours later, with his lips still sealed.

Near him lay a piece of carpet, two shovels and a satchel containing a cant-hook, a rope, a dark lantern, a bit and stake, a screwdriver and a burglar's jimmy. Whether he was shot in a quarrel with a pal or by a member of the vigilance committee which had been organized against the ghouls, no one knows. With his death, and the passage of a law giving the schools a legal means of securing co-posed persons robbing graves is a question.

Family of Ghouls.

At about this time the country was startled by the weird story which followed the arrest of the McNamee family. Some three miles from the city there had lived for five years the father, two sons and a daughter. But little was known of them, although the neighbors frequently speculated on their means of earning a livelihood.

One night a farmer named Goodrich was returning to his home late from a visit to a distant relative, when he met in the dark road a team. The road was narrow, so that in passing he was able to see the occupants of the other vehicle. He recognized them as the old man McNamee and his daughter. He was somewhat surprised to notice that the girl was dressed in man's clothes, but still more surprised to see that a muffled figure sat between them. He stopped and asked a few commonplace questions, to which he received surly replies. At this point McNamee's horse started, and as he did so threw the hat from the head of the third figure. Goodrich nearly fell from his wagon as he recognized the set features of young Wilbur Hill, who had been buried a few days before.

Goodrich, pale from fright, hurried home and roused the neighbors. They opened the grave, which had but lately been filled, and found it empty. A search of the house of the McNamees revealed spades, ropes and all the other paraphernalia of grave robbing. Further investigation of the graveyard showed that many other bodies were missing, and some of these were later discovered at Ann Arbor Medical school. The McNamees were arrested and imprisoned after a speedy trial.

Demand for Steel Caskets.

The unearthing of another gang of ghouls in New York came about in a most dramatic way, and nearly drove one of the innocent participants insane when he discovered his sister's body on the dissecting table.

Such things as these were coming to light every month in the early eighties, and naturally created much fear in the hearts of every one in the state of New York. It was at about this time that the demand was made for a casket which would withstand the depredations of these fiends. At first a cast-iron box was made, but shortly after this the modern ghoulish-proof receptacle was evolved, with springs which fasten securely on the inside. Strict laws and safer methods on the part of the medical schools in the east have made their use unnecessary here. But in the vicinity of smaller and less scrupulous colleges they are in constant demand.

FINEST BREAKWATER IN WORLD.

English Harbor Formed by Mile of Walls Costing $5,000,000.

The harbor of Plymouth, England, is protected by what is claimed to be the greatest breakwater in the world. The main part is 3,000 feet long, with two arms at angles extending 1,000 feet, thus making it nearly a mile on its entire length. It stretches across the entrance to the bay, two and a half miles from the city, and receives the force of the gales that frequently come up from the southwest.

In the center is a fortress of iron and masonry, and at either extremity a lighthouse 68 feet high.

Nearly four and a half million tons of stone were thrown into the sea as a foundation for this breakwater during the 41 years that it was building from 1813 to 1854, and it cost $9,000,000, but it made the harbor of Plymouth one of the safest in England.

The city of Plymouth fills several valleys and covers several hills. It used to be written Plymouth. No body knows how old the city is.

Good Arrangement of Cut Flowers

BY MARGARET E. BANGSTER.

I am writing on a summer day, with every window open and the fragrance of honeysuckle and roses pervading the air. Everywhere fields and gardens are rioting in flowers. Nature is luxurious in the profusion of her bounty at mid-summer, and what with rambling roses entwining the cottage porch and clematis making an exquisite screen, and morning glories clamoring over stone walls, there is not a humble home anywhere on the continent that need fear comparison with a palace.

On the coast where the salt breezes sweep in from the sea and the fog often hangs its wet blanket for awhile over the dawning day, the flowers are gorgeous in color and grow with amazing swiftness. Farther inland, on mountain farms that in winter are buried in snow, one finds verandas and garden plots rich with every variety of blossoming plant. Many a hard-working woman expresses the latent poetry of her being by the care she lavishes on her garden and the flowers look up in her face as if they wanted to compensate her for narrowness and drudgery, and to give her the joy of which the years have cheated her.

I spent a summer day years ago with Celia Thaxter at her home on one of the Isles of Shoals. The sound of the sea was in our ears, the white surf broke on the shore. The poet's house was long and low and all about it there was an exquisite garden overflowing with flowers of every name and kind, the largest space being given to the old-fashioned darlings that every one knows and loves. There were lady's slipper and prince's feather, love-lies-bleeding, ribbon grass, pansies, lilies, larkspur, mignonette, verbena, roses, geraniums, fox and I know not what else. The garden was simply a wilderness of beauty and in the house hundreds of vases held cut flowers, each vase being filled by the mistress and her maids with fresh specimens the moment there were signs of wilting or fading. The mantels were banded with flowers, the walls had a look of being covered with them, they stood on the piano, on tables and on the floor and in the midst of all, was the graceful splendid owner of the Paradise in a dress of silver gray with a silver arrow fastening her great knot of snowy hair. The whole picture fixed itself in memory once for all.

Mrs. Thaxter's rule for arranging cut flowers was inflexible. Each vase held flowers of a single variety, relieved only by their own foliage. The flame-like nasturtiums were massed in vases deep enough to afford plenty of water for the stems and flaring at the top that the flowers might not be crowded. With them were a few of their own green leaves. Carnations were arranged in tall vases of crystal clearness. Roses were in bowls. Fleur de lis were in opaque jars, the rule being in every instance so to mass the flowers as to give an effect of breadth and color.

Flowers should never be crowded. Sometimes a single rose or a single lily should have a vase all to itself. When flowers are arranged in clusters or bunches they may be contrasted, but no one should try to group too many tints or too many flowers in one vase, cup or bowl.

Certain small flowers may be kept in wide low platters with a bordering of ferns or green moss. In their arrangement for home adornment it is well to remember that the smaller and more delicate posies are prettiest for the desk and the dressing-table, while for decorative purposes as for a wedding or a reception larger flowers lend themselves better to larger effects.

Do not fear that you will lose flowers by cutting them. The more you cut, the more you will have. As a rule, a plant exhausts its possibilities of bloom if its flowers are left to wither and it speedily runs to seed. Fresh flowers for the table and the drawing-room may be had every day for the picking at this season, the wild denseness of the field taking rank with the finest cultivated specimens when brought in doors and tastefully arranged. No flower should be kept in a house after it has lost its freshness. A stale bouquet hints too strongly of decay and death.

If the daughter or sister whose privilege it is to keep the house beautiful with flowers will change the water and wash the vases every morning and will clip a tiny bit from every stem, she will find her toil repaid by the enduring qualities of her treasures. Flowers last much longer in freshness when kept in a cool place over night. Those who cut them in the country to send to a city flower mission should do so in the dusk or just after sunset. They should then be packed in paper boxes, should be laid lengthwise on a bed of wet ferns and should have sheets of wet tissue paper lightly folded over them. Pains should be taken to ship them by express so that they will arrive at the hospitals, the city missions or the homes of the poor and sick in the early morning. They will reach their destination in good condition and words cannot tell the joy they will carry with them.

One day in January when New York was like St. Petersburg I found myself in the palatial home of Madame Millionaire. Every surrounding bespoke ease, luxury and entire indifference to the cost of anything great or small. A magnificent array of bride roses on a center table and a cluster of rare orchids in a corner moved me to admiration and delight.

Not many of us can afford to give an order so generous and so unlimited to a florist, but most of us may have a few blossoming plants in our homes in winter, and we may enjoy the pleasure given by cut flowers if we provide for it beforehand. If you mean to have flowers in your home next winter, you should lay your plans in August. Select in that month the plants that shall bloom in December and January. Pot them now and let them have a long period of rest before they are again expected to cheer you with bloom.

Avoid tawdry display in vases. Nothing is prettier than clear white glass when you wish to reveal the beauty of stem. Dull jars of gray, cream or dark green tints are pretty if you wish to mass the splendid autumn flowers. The vase and flowers must be in harmony. The vase should be subordinate to the flowers and not call attention to itself. The common mistake of supposing that a vase to be beautiful must be expensive is made by those who forget that the most graceful shapes are found in pressed glass and dull pottery, and that here beauty is a thing of taste rather than of money.

Princess Lace Fan

Many women are making charming little conceits in the form of collar sets, kerchief borders, tops for fans, cases for veils, gloves and what not from lace braids. Princess lace is one of the new laces that has quite a vogue during the spring and summer.

One of the obvious reasons for its popularity may be traced to the fact that it is not necessary for the beginner to be familiar with many of the elaborate lace stitches, in order to obtain pleasing and effective results. It relies almost entirely on its beauty for the clever and judicious combination of braids. There are six varieties of lace used in making Princess Louise lace. For filling in the spaces a queer lines thread with little thorns is used.

An effective design for fan in bow knots is shown that will not be difficult.

STEALING A CADAVER FOR MEDICAL SCHOOL USE
